as we see it

If national television awards are to mean anything more than a reaffirmation of rating service figures, the winners must be selected on some basis other than sheer popularity. For that reason, when we announced that TV Guide's editors would pick a Show of the Year, we said our selection would be "the regular program that not only has offered outstanding entertainment or information, but has made the most notable contribution to . . . better television programming."

We had a great deal of help in making our choice. Readers told us whom they would select, and their choices ran from the most popular shows on the air to educational programs that have little, if any, audience. We had hoped to pick one program and name it "Show of the Year," but that proved impossible. TV is too broad a medium, its subject matter is too varied, to make one choice and say "This show has overshadowed all others in all categories."

So we were forced to select three programs in three different categories. We think these shows each have made outstanding contributions to viewers and to the medium, and certainly deserve our commendation.

Concerning the local awards to performers worthy of network recognition, we can only voice the sincere hope that the networks will heed the thousands of viewers in each area who voted for the winners. Again and again we hear that the network moguls are looking for new personalities. Well, here are the personalities—all with experience in TV and with proven ability to gain popularity with viewers. They all have tuxedos and probably will travel if a network calls.

If not, we are happy to afford them this measure of national recognition.

TV GUIDE'S

GOLD MEDAL AWARDS

THREE PROGRAMS, representing as many fields of telecasting, are honored for their outstanding achievement, initiative and enterprise and their major contributions to the industry in the TV Guide Gold Medal Awards for the 1953-54 season.

The three awards, indicating their choice as the television shows of the year, went to See It Now, news and news feature program, presented by the Columbia Broadcasting System; United States Steel Hour, presented over the American Broadcasting Company network, and Cavalcade of Sports, a feature of the National Broadcasting Company network.

The shows were selected by the editorial staff of TV Guide after months of consideration, during which both the public and its own nationwide staff were polled for recommendations. No less than 51 different shows were recommended for the honor.

The Gold Medal Awards are all of equal stature, because the three winning programs represent such distinct fields of television programming.

The 11 other shows which received the largest support, and which might be considered runners-up for "Show of the Year" honors, were, in alphabetical order, Adventure, Comedy Hour, Dragnet, Arthur Godfrey and His Friends, I Love Lucy, Life Is Worth Living, Make Room for Daddy, Omnibus, Toast of the Town, Today and Your Show of Shows.

Edward R. Murrow, right; Fred W. Friendly, center, and Cameraman Bill McClure discuss Balkan assignment for See It Now.

See It Now, which is produced by Edward R. Murrow and Fred W. Friendly, directed by Don Hewitt, and sponsored by the Aluminum Company of America, was honored for its success in bringing new standards of news coverage and interpretation into the television field. With Murrow as commentator, and the services of the world-wide staff of CBS reporters and cameramen, the program opened up new concepts of pictorial journalism. It made its news presentation interesting enough to obtain a substantial audience, without overdramatizing. Its hour-long "This Is Berlin" program, presented in September, was a milestone in television coverage. The programs devoted to Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) were instances of the program's willingness to step into major fields of public issue.

The United States Steel Hour was honored as the major addition to television's fine array of dramatic shows during the 1953-54 season. The program, presented every other Thursday, is produced by the Theater Guild and directed by Alex Segal, who previously had won acclaim for his sensitive work as director of Celanese Theater and Pulitzer Prize Playhouse. It is sponsored by the United States Steel Corporation. During the season, it brought some of the brightest names in the theater world to television, notably Helen Hayes, in "Welcome Home," Tallulah Bankhead, in "Hedda Gabler," and Rex Harrison and Lilli Palmer, in "The Man In Possession." Its opening program, "P.O.W.," written by David Davidson, was applauded for its stark, documentary-style account of the Korean war prisoners.

Cavalcade of Sports, completing its ninth season on television, is sponsored by the Gillette Safety Razor Company. It brought the television public the outstanding sports programs of the year, including the World Series between the New York Yankees and the Brooklyn Dodgers; the Rose Bowl game between U.C.L.A. and Michigan State; the Kentucky Derby, and a weekly series of Friday night boxing bouts, including several championship bouts of wide interest. Jimmy Powers, who handles the boxing commentary, is a popular sports authority. Cavalcade, through its initiative in pioneering sports coverage and its willingness to spend large sums for such major events as the World Series, has made a tremendous contribution to the growth of television.

Other shows recommended by viewers for "Show of the Year" honors, in alphabetical order, are: Action in the Afternoon, Steve Allen, Burns and Allen, Children's Theater, Bob Crosby Show, Dennis Day Show, Ding Dong School, Ethel and Albert, Firestone Theater, Colonel Humphrey Flack, Jackie Gleason Show, Hall of Fame, Hit Parade, My Favorite Husband, Spike Jones Show, Kukla, Fran and Ollie, Robert Q. Lewis, Liberace, Mama, Meet Millie, Garry Moore Show, NBC Opera, Mr. Peepers, Person to Person, Martha Raye Show, Private Secretary, Kate Smith Show, Ted Steele Show, Strike It Rich, This Is The Life, This Is Your Life, Topper, TV Playhouse, Two for the Money, Who Said That?, You Bet Your Life and the Loretta Young Show.

'53 World Series was among sport thrills brought to the public by the Cavalcade show.

Local Personalities Most Worthy of Network Recognition

THOUSANDS OF TV GUIDE READERS VOTED FOR THESE HOME TOWN FAVORITES

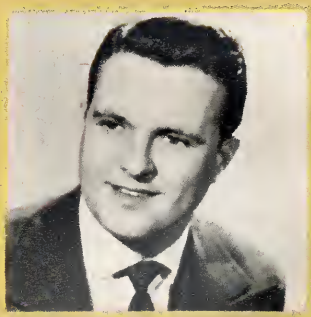
Philadelphia: John Facenda, WCAU-TV's able, soft-spoken newscaster; also an I Love Lucy commercial announcer.

Baltimore: WMAR-TV's Collegian Club, conceived by T. Oliver Hughes, prominent lumberman, in 1947 as a means of reducing juvenile delinquency. The 90-minute show presents variety acts.

Providence: Russ Emery, of WJAR-TV, emcee of New England Talent Club. He has often guested on network shows.

Wilkes-Barre: WILK-TV's Hal and Nancy Berg, stars of Carousel, a news, music show.

Washington: Art Lamb, of WTTG, pantomimes records, moderates a panel show and distaff program.



New York: Ray Forrest, of WNBT, who emcees Children's Theater. He uses educational films, many of which he makes.

Dallas: Texans voted for Gerry Johnson, comedienne who sets the pace on the popular Variety Fair of KRLD-TV.

Cincinnati: in southern Ohio, it's Walter Phillips, WLW-Television comic, who stars on a five-day-a-week variety show.

Fort Lauderdale: Florida's viewers select Jimmy Shearer, of WFTL-TV, singer of nostalgic songs.

FOR WEEKS, throughout the United States, readers of TV Guide have been voting for the local television personalities whom they believe most worthy of network recognition. These are the winners, representing 24 metropolitan areas in which the magazine circulates. They include newscasters; impresarios of children's, teen-agers' and housewives' programs; singers; interviewers and musicians of various talents—one of them a turbaned organ player who charmed viewers despite fact he uttered not a word during his show.

Pittsburgh: Wanda Saylor, WDTV star, who leads the EZC Ranch Gals with her accordion and guitar. Her "music from the heart" has put her at the top.

Syracuse: Jim Deline, of WSYR-TV, who with his Gang each day telecasts 45 minutes of song, comedy, romance and band numbers.

smoke longer and finer and milder PALL MALL

Your appreciation of quality has made PALL MALL America's most successful and most imitated cigarette

Like so many Americans, you too have probably discovered that PALL MALL has more to offer in smoking pleasure.

PALL MALL's greater length travels the smoke further. PALL MALL's fine tobaccos are the finest quality money can buy—and fine tobacco is its own best filter for sweeter, smoother smoking.

PALL MALL's greater length is only half the story

There's far more to cigarette enjoyment than just length. The other half of the story lies in PALL MALL's fine, flavorful tobaccos, the finest quality money can buy.

That's why PALL MALL smokes cool, sweet and mild...with a smoothness and satisfaction no other cigarette can offer. Start enjoying PALL MALL today.

TV Baby Album: The tot in the photo was a quiet child. Now that she's grown up, her sister tells us, you can't shut her up. She got her start on TV as a deadpan comedienne on the old Bob & Ray program, and later joined Gleason. She is a redhead and was born in China. This week's baby album star: Audrey Meadows.

Know her?

Channel Chatter: Herbert I. Wexler, head of the world's largest TV and music department (Macy's), reports that, to date, he's sold not one color TV set.

Lots of talk around about Jimmy Powers' rather one-sided commentary on the Olson-Gavilan fight. Gavilan looked much better to viewers, apparently, than to Jimmy—who was for Olson all the way.

Vivian Vance and Bill Frawley are headed this way for a May 4th appearance on the Milton Berle show.

If our story about Duffy's Tavern, page 20, has raised your thirst, drop in on Arch Monday night, 7 P.M., on ❹.

Erratum: The United States Steel Hour is presented on alternate Tuesdays, not every other Thursday, as erroneously recorded on page six of this issue.

Worth Watching: Letter to Lee Graham, Monday through Friday, 2-2:30 P.M., ❺. The remarkable Miss Graham manages to combine glamor with common sense. She dispenses the latter in the form of solutions to problems sent to her by women in her audience. Her realistic approach to living is refreshing.

Correspondence for this department should be addressed to Managing Editor, TV GUIDE, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York 20, N. Y.

Boner of the Week

Instead of TV pulling a boner, you did. In your article about the Roller Derby you captioned a picture with Gerry Murray's name. The girl in the photo was really Blanche Lopez. I know because Blanche is the only one of the Chiefs with a poodle haircut.—Dorothy Gernovich, Manhattan. [Two tickets to a TV show to you, and to every reader whose boner letter is printed.—ED.]

Gerry Murray

Voice of a Viewer

I would like to voice my objection to the new Herb Sheldon program. When it was on at noon, with just Herb, my two sons watched it. Now they won't even turn on the set. And I liked Josephine McCarthy by herself. With the two programs combined, nix.—Mrs. Charles P. Aprill, Cranford, N. J.

Ire of the Irish

Believe me, no Irish colleen worthy of the name would appear in a costume such as the one Mary Ellen Terry wore in a TV GUIDE photograph recently. This is proved by the film which preceded the parade on WPIX on St. Patrick's day. In part, it showed colleens doing Irish folk dances and they were decently clad.—Marion Croft, East Rockaway, N. Y.

Saturday mornings, 9 to 10:30 a.m.

WNBT ★ 4

NBC

The Winner!

LOCAL TV PERSONALITY MOST WORTHY OF NETWORK RECOGNITION

RAY FORREST

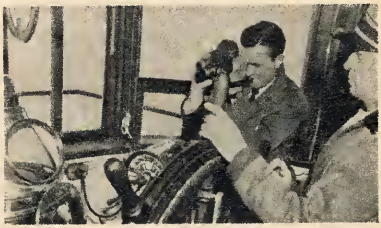
Ray never talks down. Kids think of him as a big brother.

HOORAY for Ray! Young Mr. Forrest chopped down all opposition to take the coveted TV Guide award in our recent poll. "And who's Ray Forrest?" you may ask.

Mothers and youngsters know him well. As one New York mommy wrote TV Guide when she cast her ballot, "When Ray's on TV I don't worry about my kids. They're in the living room, glued to the set the whole time he's on."

You'll find the films Ray shows on Children's Theater (Saturday, 9-10:30 A.M., 4) to adult liking, too. Why not tune in?

Son Ray, going on nine, and wife Charlotte, come up with ideas for new films.



Ray makes a movie aboard a harbor boat. He's been down in a submarine, too.

At home in Ridgewood, N.J., Ray dubs sound on film in his basement studio.

Ray was WNBT's first announcer. He's now an expert movie-maker, self-taught.

TV Teletype*

NEW YORK Bob Stahl reports:

Saturday Night Review will again be the summer replacement for Your Show of Shows, starting June 12 for 13 weeks. There will be no HOAGY CARMICHAEL this year, though. Instead, EDDIE ALBERT will emcee and BEN BLUE and ALAN YOUNG will alternate each week as featured comedians. NBC will again emphasize its comedy development plan on the program, spotlighting new talent and hoping to come up with another GEORGE GOBEL.

Speaking of GOBEL, he's set now to star in his one half-hour show on NBC next fall. Meanwhile, he does an in-person engagement at New York's Waldorf-Astoria for four weeks, starting May 6 . . . All four TV networks are switching to Daylight Saving Time April 25. That means that if your area retains Standard Time, you'll be seeing your regular programs one hour earlier.

JOSEPH KRAMM, author of the recent Broadway hit, The Shrike, developing a new TV program titled Theater of the Imagination. It's to be produced and directed by ALEX SEGAL, of U. S. Steel Hour . . . GIL LAMB signed to do a Bozo, the Clown telefilm series . . . Another new dramatic series is being cooked up for MARLENE DIETRICH, but it will have to win her approval. She doesn't want to do TV.

Those big "spectacular" programs NBC plans for every fourth Saturday and every fourth Monday nights next fall line up as some of the costliest yet staged for TV. They'll comprise entire musical comedies, operettas, circuses, aquacades, ice shows, etc. and will be staged in color--available to black-and-white sets, too, of course.

Consensus of critics who reviewed the RODGERS and HAMMERSTEIN extravaganza the other Sunday was that the comedians -- GROUCHO MARX, JACK BENNY and EDGAR BERGEN -- were more hindrance than help to the otherwise delightful program. The story is that the hour and a half could not have been pre-empted from regular sponsors unless the big name stars were included . . . Choice crack was made afterwards by composer RICHARD RODGERS, who asked: "Do you think Irving Berlin will demand equal time to answer this?"

The ROBERT Q. LEWIS program, now seen from 4:30 to 5, will be shifted to an early evening time period, at least for the summer . . . JACK PAAR, who now takes over for GODFREY on Friday mornings, will also get a crack at an evening time. That's nothing new for him, though. PAAR has been almost a perennial summer replacement on CBS.

*Trade-mark, Teletype Corp.

HOLLYWOOD

Dan Jenkins reports:

IMOGENE COCA, excited over the prospect of a new series and the distinct possibility of doing it from Hollywood on film, is also talking seriously with ROSALIND RUSSELL about doing a co-starring feature picture this summer. Film would be produced by FRED BRISSON, MISS RUSSELL's husband.

There's a whopping big ten-year deal brewing between WALT DISNEY and ABC-TV. Initial results of which will be five or six hour-long shows to be produced by DISNEY starting in the fall. There is also a possibility that a single sponsor will step in to take over all DISNEY-produced shows for the network.

For future Academy Award telecasts, the Academy hopes to get the "institutional" type of sponsorship, such as FORD presented on its 50th anniversary show last year, rather than "hard-sell" commercials.

ABC people here are getting excited over the way singer MARGARET WHITING's friendly, straightforward personality comes across on her daily local show. She should be network-bound before the summer is out.

RAY BOLGER's Where's Raymond? series will be a little different next season, with more emphasis on situation comedy and less on musical comedy. The latter has proved too expensive, with most of the excess money having come out of BOLGER's personal pocket . . . BILL BENDIX has completed his 79th Life of Riley films and is now motoring East for a vacation.

The JACK BENNY Variety Review takes to the road for a summer tour, beginning June 14 with a two-week stand in Dallas. Besides BENNY, troupe will include GISELLE MACKENZIE and WILL MASTIN TRIO with SAMMY DAVIS, JR.

A new film series, Crackdown, based on factual cases of the Texas Rangers, goes into production here next month. JOEL McCREA may be starred . . . Composer-conductor CARMEN DRAGON has an interesting off-beat musical show in the works. Wants to break it in on radio this summer, then switch to TV this fall. The one personality he needs, and has asked for, to make the TV version one of the brightest new shows in years: OLIVER J. DRAGON.

TOM EWELL, long signed to an NBC contract, finally gets a show. He's been set to play Mr. Blanding (the one who built the dream house) in a network series to be produced by WORTHINGTON MINER . . . ANNE JEFFREYS and hubby ROBERT STERLING are touring the country to plug their Topper series. They return here in May to become parents.

THE MASK

PROGRAM OF THE WEEK

THE MASK is TV's first hour-long mystery series, and it's a good one. With Gary Merrill and William Prince starring each week as brothers and attorneys who get involved in adventuresome escapades, The Mask comes as welcome relief to the many half-hour private eye shows with their cut-and-dried formats. It's worth a tune-in by any discerning viewer.

ABC originally conceived The Mask for the hotly competitive Sunday-night-at-8 period, on the assumption that only something new and different could lure viewers away from Toast of the Town and Comedy Hour. Unfortunately, too few viewers apparently were willing to be lured. In a further attempt to build an audience, The Mask continues live on Sunday nights with kinescopes of each program telecast Tuesday and Wednesday nights as well. It's hoped that viewers who see the kine might be tempted to watch the Sunday night original.

At ease: Gary Merrill, Pat Breslin snare a pet instead of a criminal on The Mask.

As with most straight TV dramatic programs, the hour length gives The Mask greater opportunity to build characterizations and to delineate the story. Not all scripts have been successful. Some weeks it seems that the writers have padded a good half-hour show to 60 minutes, including extraneous material that detracts from the story line.

Some of the stories, however, have been tightly written and edited, sustaining maximum impact over the full hour-long route. Hitting top suspense, for example, was a story dealing with a deported gangland chief who sneaked back into this country to revive his syndicate, and one in which the brothers broke up a black-market passport ring on the Brooklyn waterfront.

Merrill and Prince, both accomplished actors, play modern Robin Hoods who are on the alert to rescue the downtrodden. Supporting casts have included some of the best Broadway and TV actors, such as Virginia Gilmore and Luther Adler.

Don McNeill: fans know what they want.

Breakfast Club

DON McNEILL and his Breakfast Club crew have been dispensing a Midwestern brand of off-the-cob humor on radio for more than 20 years. The show recently became available to TV viewers through the simple device of posting a couple of cameras in strategic places around the studio. As a TV program, it's definitely not for the sophisticates, but its lengthy radio tenure proves there must be many people who like this type of entertainment.

McNeill's stock in trade probably could best be defined as folk humor. The show originates from Chicago which, after all, is a big city. But it is pitched at a more hinterlandish type of audience, as witness the small towners who turn up in the studio each morning. These people have made the show into a national institution. Breakfast Club does manage to evoke a warm, friendly feeling, which is probably the chief reason for McNeill's success, and proof that he's a competent showman.

McNeill himself is a big, good-natured guy who dishes out the corn expertly. He has surrounded himself with a talented group of performers, including Sam Cowling, his chief heckler; singers Johnny Desmond and Eileen Parker; the Eddie Valentine orchestra, and Fran Allison, of Kukla, Fran and Ollie as "Aunt Fanny."

FINE TUNING By OLLIE CRAWFORD

FIRST color telecast of prize fight called success. Now TV can bring you the fights in glorious black and blue.

It's only a matter of time until the sports announcers call it a color clash.

The fighters are knocked down on the seat of their blue and gold trunks, instead of plain old black and white. The seconds' towels are gray, but not tattletale. One fighter was so pessimistic, he had the soles of his shoes colored.

When one fighter is knocked down, the other guy has to go to a neutral gray corner.

Dumb Dora looked at the seconds and said the color was almost as good as the firsts. She rooted for one guy, just because he matched her living room drapes. Sure enough, he ended up draped over the ropes. He started out brilliantly, but faded at the end.

He came into the ring a sort of cool blue, and got knocked cold.

The TV producer was happy, because they said they were getting him a couple of green fighters.

Sarah Churchill and Maurice Evans: their 'King Richard' scaled television heights.

Sarah & Shakespeare

SHE'S ONE ACTRESS WHO DOESN'T UNDERRATE THE TV PUBLIC

Better than most crime shows, Shakespeare's "King Richard II" has blood flowing freely and often. But in many minds, appreciation of the Bard has been limited to intellectuals, pseudo - intellectuals and reluctant high school students. Maurice Evans as the tragic, deposed King; Sarah Churchill as his Queen; and Hallmark as the benefactor with $175,000, proved otherwise. Televised to 55 cities, King Richard reached heights of tragedy unparalleled, satisfying both the curious and the lovers of good theater.

Sarah Churchill, who last year played Ophelia to Evans' widely hailed TV "Hamlet," is sure that "people underrate the TV public." To her, "this is one of the exciting things about it. You don't play down—or up. Just straight, and people love you for it."

Months after "Richard's" TV debut (Jan. 24th) people are still showering love and thanks upon Sarah, Evans, Hallmark and NBC at the rate of 60 to 70 letters a day. One earnest young fan wrote in exalted terms about Sarah's performance, ending with the tribute, "You're so great, you're good enough to play Evangeline."

Sarah would rather do more Shakespeare. "He gives you more theater for your money—his plays are more integrated than ordinary ones and they come off more intimately on TV than on the stage." But the chances of the Bard's work becoming a TV regular are slight. The play which brought Evans stardom on Broadway in 1937 had not been presented previously for 60 years in this country.

"Dramatically," Sarah explains, " 'Richard' is harder to do than 'Hamlet.' The story line is not as clearly defined. As a result, viewers are less familiar with the play." Technically, the play presented immense scaling problems. Richard's castle loomed on the screen, castle-sized, with steep embankments 40 feet high; the gate had to be built wide enough to allow horse-riding warriors to pass through three abreast; the sets took almost 3500 man-hours to build and paint. To cope with the enormity of the project, miniature microphones were hidden in the knights' lances to pick up voices of roving actors. Costumes were from Evans' original production.

Unquestionably TV's most successful Shakespeare to date, Hallmark is the only sponsor which allotted two hours per production ("Hamlet" and "Richard"). "King Lear," another unhappy King, was done in 90 minutes; "Othello," "Romeo and Juliet" and "The Taming of the Shrew" were cut to one hour or less. To the young Churchill, "Shakespeare wrote for unhurried audiences. You can't squeeze the magnificence of his work into an hour and still be effective. Evans is a genius and he needed two full hours."

TV—An Iron Lung?

She told of having spent four consecutive days at Stratford-on-Avon. "Every day I saw the same play and every day it was better. I always discover new things in his works. But don't think I want to do repertory theater. Any actress who says she wants to do repertory must be terribly young. TV is the closest thing to it—an hour show is two-thirds of a stage production. Besides, that's what people call TV. Isn't it repertory in an iron lung?"

For Hallmark, Sarah is hostess, narrator and occasional star. "I adore this show. Most of it is historical and I learn as I go along," says the daughter of Britain's Sir Winston Churchill. "But I do prefer doing past historical plays to contemporary ones. In any story, we might suggest just a tiny, harmless romance to help the play along. If it's about a living person, the moment the show is over, his wife is on the phone denying the whole thing. Even when we do the dead, grandnieces write us saying, 'Great Aunt Priscilla never said anything like that'—no matter what that was."

The gentle Churchill flew to New York for the Evans production and flew right back to Hollywood to continue the Hallmark series uninterrupted. "I'm happy to be leaving," she said. "New York is such an immediate city. Everything is about to happen here. Cities have temperament. Rome is eternal. London is, well, easier—for me," she qualified. "Hollywood is the place where you get fresh air whether you want to or not. This summer, I plan to go home to London (husband and family are there). The year should have 18 months. Then I could spend six in this country, six in England and six holidaying."

"Vacations are nice," we agreed.

"Not vacations," Sarah emphasized. "That implies doing nothing at all. Holidaying is more like a spree. I want to do 'Mis-Alliance' on the London stage this summer. That's not a vacation. That will be a definite spree."

"Hello, Duffy's Tavern"

'Duffy ain't here.' But Finnegan, Archie, Miss Duffy, and Charley the Waiter are.

The Place Where The Elite Meet To Eat Is On TV Now

DUFFY'S TAVERN, the long-remembered radio show, is now beginning to show its face on television, and this should be cause for considerable rejoicing among the former listeners. One of the most literate illiterate shows on the air, it had a flavor all its own, and was perhaps the forerunner of the informal school of radio programming.

Ed Gardner, the "Archie" of the famed restaurant, is not particularly overjoyed with the current turn of events. "This television," he says, "is too tough on an old guy like me. But we were livin' in Spain, which is a good little town, and there wasn't nobody there you could talk shop with and I couldn't even get a good table at a restaurant on account of all the dukes so I just got real hammy and came home."

If it just weren't for the physical activity, Gardner actually would find the TV film version of Duffy's Tavern a good deal easier than the radio show. "In radio," he explains, "I was the producer and the director and half the time the writer and also Archie. I was goin' all the time. It was an awful mental strain. But here it's different. Hal Roach, Jr., does the producing and Harve Foster he directs and they bring the scripts in and they're in pretty good shape. All I have to do is memorize the lines and I'm not so sharp at it.

"But it's them hot lights and all that standin' around that gets me. We're shootin' in color so they gotta light the place up like it was the third degree and by five in the afternoon I tell ya I'm shot. We figured to make only 26 films, but just this morning they tell me we're set for 13 more and I should bust my head against a wall or something."

The show's supporting cast includes the veteran Jimmy Conlin as Charley the Waiter, and Alan Reed, the Pasquale of the old Luigi show, as Finnegan. Miss Duffy, the role originated by Gardner's former wife, Shirley Booth, is being played by Pattee Chapman, whom Gardner found behind the counter of a Beverly Hills ice cream shop.

Leave Me Face It

Duffy's Tavern was born back in 1939 when Gardner, who talks like Archie but is a good deal smarter, was producing shows for an advertising agency. He had planned a show designed to contrast the cultural side of New York with the seamy side and had set Deems Taylor as the protagonist for culture. When he listened to the playback of Taylor's audition record, for which Gardner himself had cued Taylor's lines, he suddenly realized that his own voice was just the one he had been looking for to play the other side of the coin. "That," he says gloomily, "is what comes of bein' born in Astoria."

Having thus successfully auditioned on Gardner's behalf, Taylor dropped out and Duffy's Tavern came into being. It went on the air in 1940 and enjoyed a run of 12 years. Three years ago Gardner moved to Puerto Rico and taped the show from there. He was widely criticized for the move on the grounds that he was ducking the income tax and the show's popularity fell off to the point where it was dropped.

"So we took the two kids and moved to Spain," he says. "I was gonna retire. But them dukes kept gettin' all the good tables in the restaurants and like I said there was nobody to talk shop with."

He and his second wife, the former Simone Hegeman, now live on a Beverly Hills hillside in an Early American home with their two children, Ed, Jr., 11, and Steve, 6. A tall, rangy man with a face best described as a kindly mug, Gardner swims, plays a pretty good game of tennis, is an avid sports fan and a heavy reader. But he's almost resigned to being Archie for the rest of his life. "I'm enough of a ham to want to stay in the swim," he says, "and today all the swimmin' is bein' done in TV."

Why 'Leave It To The Girls' Left

Can It Be That Men Don't Care What Women Think?

THE NOTION that a woman's place is in the home seemingly had gone into disfavor as just another one of those old husband's tales. Then, along came television, and with it a fluttery little item called Leave It to the Girls, said to be TV's first panel show. Girls put four representatives of New York City's glamor set to work for a half-hour every week, said work involving tossing off as many "devastating" comments as possible to asperse the inferior male.

Martha Rountree, a gracious Southern lady somewhat famous as co-creator and sometime moderator of Meet the Press, a TV show with considerably more substance, is also originator and owner of Leave It to the Girls. "I'm a very serious person," reports Miss Rountree, explaining why she did not appear as a panelist on the frivolous Girls panel. What she had in mind for the show was a sort of drawing-room entertainment wherein a series of epigrams and high-grade insults would be exchanged, building to a hilarious climax, and all proving that girls are not only just as good as boys, but probably better.

Since the show's debut, which actually took place on radio, in May, 1945, it has been on and off the air for various reasons. It has just been cancelled by its latest sponsor, and the prevailing opinion is that Leave It to the Girls has left for the last time. This might indicate that Miss Rountree's idea requires a little more time to shape up. It's only had nine years now.

Minor Problem Dept.

The problems kicked around by the panel are sent in by fans, and deal with such cerebral matters as "Should a husband bring his wife to the office

Christmas party?" or "Who is better in an emergency—a man or a woman?"

Eloise McElhone, an incessant chatterer and one of the three regular members of the show along with Maggi McNellis and John Henry Faulk, was responsible for most of the planks in the panel's anti-male platform. Eloise is Miss Rountree's discovery. Martha knew her as a veritable tower of babble and was therefore somewhat shocked to find Eloise pulling the Sphinx act her first three appearances. After that she apparently decided that TV was no different from a ladies' bridge social and, in the words of Miss Rountree, "hasn't stopped talking since."

In the interests of future historians in search of pertinent social commentary from our age, we have set down some of the wiser sayings of Leave It to the Girls panelists, with Eloise, as always, having the most to say. These opinions, we must point out, are those of the panelists and very probably not those of women in general.

Value Of A Man

Miss McElhone, in defense of a woman's right to do all the talking in a phone conversation: "It's my dime. What a man has to say isn't worth 10 cents."

Eloise, on the subject of wife supporting husband: "When a woman has to bring home the bacon, it's pretty obvious that she's coming home to a pretty bad egg."

Florence Pritchett, who turns up fairly often on the panel, discoursed thusly on men vs. women in emergencies: "It's the woman who saves the day in history's great moments. Men create emergencies. Women straighten them out. In a fire, you'll see a woman trying to save the children. The man will be looking for his fishing hat. The woman will put her hat on and do something while the man, when he finds his hat, will just talk through it." Thunderous applause.

Eloise, on a man who refuses to get married though engaged for three years: "I'd tell him to get married or get lost." On dating: "Remember, be charming, be intelligent and be careful." Her definition of a gentleman: "One who will make your mother say, 'Was he the one you met in church?'"

John Henry Faulk.

Views On Own Sex

On the fact that women thus far have not accomplished much as historical figures: "Women have been too busy so far inflating the male ego. Now they're starting to move." On the suggestion that a woman being executed would still be sure she was made up properly: "A woman cares enough how she looks to pretty up even before she dies." And, as our final pearl: "A man likes to be a woman's first love. A woman likes to be a man's first romance."

Isn't it all too cynical?

With Leave It to the Girls leaving, it might be assumed that the panelists will now have to go out and get work. However, there will be no problems along that line. Most of the panelists are successful career women and the rest are married to well-to-do (excuse the expression) men. If for nothing else, Girls will be of historical value to TV as the Number One launcher of TV careers for women. Among those who first appeared via Girls are Dorothy Kilgallen, Faye Emerson, Betty Furness, Robin Chandler and Harriet Van Horne.
